Canadian equity performance was lackluster in the third quarter as trade concerns weighed on sentiment. The Seymour Mid-Cap Equity Fund returned 0.1%, outperforming the S&P/TSX Completion Total Return Index, which returned -0.3%.

Cargojet Inc. (+30.4% in Q3), the leading dedicated provider of time sensitive overnight air cargo services in Canada, was a material contributor to performance in the quarter. Cargojet is a well-managed company with strong insider ownership and a market-leading position in a steady and growing business with high barriers to entry. In early 2014, Cargojet was awarded a transformative contract from Purolator that nearly doubled the company's revenues and provided opportunities for fleet optimization, which in turn opened up new growth opportunities. Today, Cargojet is enjoying very strong growth in its core overnight network, reflecting strength in the economy and a growing tailwind from e-commerce. Cargojet's market capitalization has crossed the $1-billion threshold, and the stock is garnering new interest from sell-side research analysts and a broader shareholder base. Although the stock has re-rated, we continue to view valuation as attractive given strength in the underlying fundamentals, and the company's unrivalled dominant position in a solid, growing business. The company's entrepreneurial management team continues to successfully pursue new avenues for growth.

Shares of Brookfield Business Partners L.P. ('BBU'), Brookfield Asset Management Ltd.'s publicly-traded private equity vehicle, climbed 17.5% in the quarter. Brookfield has a solid, long-term track record as a value-oriented buyer and operator of businesses in a variety of industries and geographies and its management team is extremely adept at deal structuring and financing. BBU, which has been an active acquirer since it was spun out in June 2016, is targeting compound annual returns of 15 – 20% by acquiring high-quality businesses and applying Brookfield's global investing and operational expertise to create value.

Resource stocks performed poorly and the Fund's holdings in midstream operator Keyera Corp. (-4.2% in Q3) and oilfield service company CES Energy Solutions Corp. (-4.8% in Q3) were a drag on performance. Profitability of Canadian oil producers continues to be constrained by a shortage of pipeline takeaway capacity, and producers are responding by cutting cap ex budgets. Recently, the discount that Canadian producers receive for Western Canadian Select (WCS) crude relative to North American Western Texas Intermediate (WTI) expanded to multi-year highs as refinery outages exasperated the supply glut. While we don't foresee a quick fix to the industry's challenges, particularly given new roadblocks to pipeline construction (i.e. court rejection of the TransMountain Expansion's regulatory approval), we expect egress challenges will ultimately be resolved by new crude-by-rail capacity and eventually, new pipeline construction.

Maxar Technologies Ltd. (-35.0% in Q3), a vertically integrated space and geospatial intelligence company, also weighed on performance. Maxar (previously MacDonald, Dettwiler and Associates Ltd. or 'MDA') has a very strong R&D capability and competitive positioning in multiple segments of the space industry, an industry with strong barriers to entry. We opportunistically initiated a position earlier this year when Maxar shares came under pressure following the acquisition of DigitalGlobe ('DGI'), a leading leading vendor of space imagery and geospatial content. Maxar's debt levels are elevated following the DGI acquisition and some of MDA's legacy businesses face growth challenges, however, we believe these challenges have been overly discounted in the stock's valuation. We believe DGI's strong recurring revenues will allow it to support higher debt levels in the interim, and Maxar will eventually delever using the significant free cash flow it is ultimately expected to generate.

Shares of Real Matters Inc. (-20.2% in Q3), a disruptive technology platform company that provides software solutions and services to mortgage lending and insurance companies for appraisals, title & closing, and insurance inspections, continue to face selling pressure. Although the company faces some near-term macro headwinds for originations, Real Matters is nevertheless attracting new clients and taking market share. We remain optimistic about the company's longer-term growth prospects, and believe Real Matters is well-positioned to execute on a sizeable growth opportunity.

As we look forward, we are encouraged by two key recent developments that should help alleviate some investor angst and hopefully contribute to an increase in business investment. In early October, a tentative, re-negotiated North American trade deal ('United States-Mexico-Canada agreement') was reached, and a positive Final Investment Decision (FID) on the LNG Canada project was announced. These are key announcements that come at a time of uncertainty in the political and regulatory environment (which we think has contributed to the lackluster performance of Canadian equities). Canadian equity returns have lagged earnings growth this year and valuations now appear reasonable or attractive in many cases. The S&P/TSX Composite Index is trading at a forward price-to-earnings multiple of 13 times, below its historical average of 15 times.

As we begin the fourth quarter, we are seeing increased volatility in global equity markets. The catalyst for the recent sell-off appears to be a sharp rise in bond yields, while US-China trade tensions are also weighing on sentiment. We expect further interest rate hikes and the removal of stimulus could cause further volatility in equities, which may provide interesting buying opportunities.
